Monthly Commentary

October was a month where markets attempted to look beyond the rising interest rate narrative, which has dominated all asset prices in 2022. The way forward was led by the Dow Jones, which registered its best monthly performance since 1976. Of course, the Dow Jones is a narrow measure of just thirty large companies, so some caution is warranted in not reading too much into this. However, it is a sign of how low some prices have become, and how prices can quickly change. Markets are wrestling with the possible easing of lockdown conditions in China, which would fire up economic activity. As a key producer and consumer of raw materials and energy, a shift would be significant, both in real terms, and for the psychological lift it would offer. There has been no definitive change to current policies, but lockdown will not continue forever. In the same way, interest rates will not increase forever, and as interest rates are a so-called blunt instrument, there are unintended consequences and problems that are becoming visible, as the effects of increases are felt. Look no further than the chaos in the UK bond (gilt) market or the performance of certain large and systematically important financial institutions (SIFI). No central bank wants to deal with problems in the financial system, as they would have to step in to ensure its survival. Markets are anticipating changes to the pace and scale of rate rises, even though there is no clarity yet on any central bank policy shift. Volatility dominated the month across markets with weakness in the fund's hydrogen focussed companies and parts of the solar industry. However, there were strong performances from lithium, copper, silver as well as the main part of the fund's solar holdings. This strength was generated by specific companies, rather than entire sectors, demonstrating that both sector and stock selection are key. Copper is interesting, as a forward-looking indicator of economic activity, and we are keeping a close eye on this sector. We are living in interesting times!

Risk and return profile

Risk and return profile

This risk indicator is designed to illustrate the fund's risk/return profile. The higher the rating on the scale, the greater the earnings potential, but also the more significant the risk of suffering a loss. This risk indicator is based on historical data and therefore cannot predict future performance. The rating may change in future and does not represent a guarantee. A category 1 rating also does not represent a completely risk-free investment. The unit class is rated as category 6, because the unit class price has demonstrated high levels of variation in the past.

The following risk categories may be of significant importance and are not adequately encompassed in the risk indicator:

Liquidity risks: Where a significant level of investment is made in financial instruments, which by their nature are sufficiently liquid, but which under certain circumstances can have a relatively low level of liquidity, this may have an impact on the level of liquidity of the sub-fund as a whole.

Default risk: The fund transacts business with several counterparties. If a counterparty becomes insolvent, the fund's outstanding debts may not be paid or may only be partially paid.

Operational risks and risks relating to the custody of assets: The fund may fall victim to fraud and/or other criminal activities. It may incur losses due to external events, insufficient internal processes, system failures or human error on the part of the management company, depositary/subdepositary or external third parties.

Credit risks: The sub-fund invests directly or indirectly in bonds / convertible bonds. If the issuer of a bond / convertible bond does not pay interest on time or does not repay the nominal amount, the bond / convertible bond may suffer a significant or total loss of value. A downgrading of the issuer's credit rating may also cause the bond / convertible bond to suffer a significant or total loss of value.

Emerging market risk: The sub-fund invests in emerging markets (less developed markets) which are generally associated with a higher level of political, regulatory and legal risk. Increased economic uncertainty, lower liquidity, a higher rate of inflation and lower total capitalisation are also to be expected.
