Monthly Commentary

Markets in July were supported by progress on tariffs, well-received corporate earnings from key companies, and the continued desire for exposure to the Artificial Intelligence sector. A key event was the approval by the House of Representatives of President Trump's key tax and spending plans, the so-called 'Big Beautiful Bill'. With market deregulation, and pressure on the Federal Reserve to reduce interest rates, investing spirits are being lifted. It is worth noting that the US M2 money supply in June reached a record high of $22.0 trillion, with a year-over-year growth rate of 4.5%. This is the fastest pace of increase since July 2022 and has the potential to impacting asset prices and inflation – too much money chasing too few goods. Tariff deals between the US and several trading partners were struck ahead of the 1st August deadline. Markets prefer certainty, and there was a positive reaction to these deals, even though they push prices higher. The view in most cases is that it could have been much worse. The copper price had its own extraordinary tariff drama to contend with as US President Trump imposed a 50% tariff on imports of semi-finished copper and intensive copper derivative products. From the end of June price of $5.03, an intra-month high of $5.79, to an end of month price of $4.35! Copper miners weathered the storm well and pulled back marginally. Gold remains in a sideways consolidation, whilst silver was more volatile, but also remains constructive, as do the underlying mining companies. The main action came from the fund's rare earth holdings, which rose substantially on the US announcement that it is committed to developing its own production and refining capacity, aiming to reduce China's current near total dominance. Top fund holding MP Materials jumped some 84.9% in dollar terms, and other rare earth companies also tracked higher. It also worth noting that lithium stocks are building their own upward momentum, from low levels. For example, Albemarle rose 8.3% with other lithium producers also showing signs of life. There is value to be found in the sectors that have been sidelined for some time, and it is our opinion that there is more to come.
