Monthly Commentary

August 2025 delivered a strong return for the fund. Markets chose to focus on supply issues for key materials, as well as President Trump's influence and intervention at the US Federal Reserve (Fed). Central bank independence has been a source of comfort and stability for markets, but political interference is on the agenda and is seen as undermining financial decision-making and monetary credibility. There is a belief that short-term rates will be lowered in the US, because of weaker employment data, and in the face of this political pressure. However, Fed Chairman Powell delivered a speech at the annual Jackson Hole gathering and stated they will set rates: "based solely on their assessment of the data and its implications for the economic outlook and the balance of risks. We will never deviate from that approach." Markets are looking beyond his tenure and expect more developments and political interference. In light of this, gold made a new month-end closing high of $3,447.95 up 4.8% on the month, silver closed just below $40 up 8.19% and is now outperforming gold. This drove gold and silver mining companies significantly higher, such that stocks in the sector are now outperforming the underlying physical metals. The relative values of the precious metal mining sector are in our opinion still favourable, and we remain optimistic on their future path. The fund also benefitted from exposure to rare-earth stocks, which have moved significantly higher given increased geopolitical tension with China, and US efforts to promote domestic supply. The fund took partial profits on some of the larger holdings, which enabled further diversification in this sector. Copper consolidated sideways in the aftermath of the unexpected change in tariffs that came at the end of July. However, copper mining companies performed well and remain in the spotlight as takeover/ consolidation targets, and alternative energy companies are staging a powerful comeback. These trends are developing well and we look ahead with optimism.
